THOUGHTS ON INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION

REFLEXIONS

SUR LA COOPÉRATION INTERNATIONALE

U THANT

Secretary-General of the United Nations Organization.

Extracts from the Message given on the occasion of the 20th Anniversary of the United Nations, published in the October 1965 issue of the UN Monthly Chronicle.

IF ever there was a time in the history of man when he ought to find it intolerable to live with the risk of war—which indeed is a risk of annihilation—and when he had the means to dispel it and to promote instead the well-being of humanity in every corner of the earth, that time is now...

We have a mounting fear and hatred of war throughout the world, based partly upon the new destructive power of weapons and partly upon a moral revulsion against violence. We have a general agreement, in principle at least, that the domination of one nation or group of nations by another is intolerable, and that mutual aid and co-operation are the best basis for the relationship between nations. We have the possibility of raising standards of living and opportunity through international co-operation—an immense incentive to peace.

We can, if we work together, provide, within a generation or so, a much higher standard of living and reasonable opportunities for all men. We have the possibility of great advances in science, technology and in as yet unexplored realms of the human mind, as well as in outer space—advances all of which will be more rapid and less risky if the skill and talent of all nations can be combined in an organized effort. Finally, we have an agreed framework, the United Nations system, within which, if we wish, we can pursue our aims and bring about an orderly development in international life.

PAUL VI à U THANT

Extrait d'une lettre du 26 mai 1966 à l'occasion de la réunion à Milan du Conseil d'Administration du Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement (L'Osservatore Romano, 17 juin 1966).

La pensée « le développement est le nouveau nom de la paix » a été lancée par le Cardinal Feltrin, en 1962, et reprise en septembre 1965 par Mgr Larrain, président de l'ELAM.

C' EST l'homme en effet dans son intégralité que le développement veut promouvoir harmonieusement, et c'est donc une triple faim qu'il s'agit de combler, alors que les nécessités et les inquiétudes se font chaque jour plus pressantes. De cette misère physique, intellectuelle et spirituelle, le Programme des Nations Unies pour le développement a une vue toujours plus nette, avec la volonté d'y remédier. Mais il faut pour cela que le monde entier prenne conscience que la misère n'est pas seulement un mal insupportable pour celui qui en est la victime, mais qu'elle doit l'être aussi pour tout homme digne de ce nom. Permettre à l'homme de survivre, certes, mais lui fournir aussi les moyens de vivre pleinement, comme une personne apte à fonder une famille et à donner une éducation satisfaisante à ses enfants : telles sont les tâches qui appellent le concours désintéressé de tous les hommes de bien, par-delà toutes les différences de nation, de race, de culture et de religion. Aussi bien, l'homme d'aujourd'hui doit s'en convaincre chaque jour davantage : c'est de sa propre existence qu'il s'agit, et non d'une aide facultative et de secours d'urgence. Ce sont toutes les ressources humaines qu'il importe de mobiliser, et il ne suffit pas de donner de son avoir, il faut encore y apporter le meilleur de son être. La paix à laquelle le monde aspire ne se construira qu'à ce prix, car, comme on l'a dit très justement, « le développement est le nouveau nom de la paix ».

RENE MAHEU
Director-General of Unesco.
New Year message to all young persons who will be twenty years old in 1966 (Indian National Commission for Unesco Newsletter March 1966).

I KNOW that we have not wholly succeeded in persuading you that justice and reason, tolerance and goodwill, must inspire your thoughts and govern your actions, when, in the world which we are handing on to you, injustice and hatred, misunderstanding and violence, are still rife. We have not succeeded in making you bend your energies exclusively to the work of securing the unity of mankind, which is peace—we who still inflict on you the spectacle of our discords and rivalries. And I know all too well that we have not given you equality and that, in spite of truly substantial advances, we have not yet managed to provide for each of you sufficient education, science and culture to ensure that you all have equal opportunities of self-fulfilment.

All this I know. But I also know, and can assure you, with equal certainty and conviction, that never, especially for the young, have there been so many opportunities, so many means, so many reasons to give expression and reality to that humanity which is in each and every one of us. Never has it been so possible, and so necessary, to be a man, and nothing—no lack, no flaw in today's world—must turn you aside from this inspiring and sacred task.

We live in an age when nature has been mastered, an age of which a great scientist has said : "For the first time in the course of history, man on earth faces only himself ; he finds no longer any other partner or foe".

We live in an age when men are being brought together into a single brotherhood by the instantaneous nature of communication media.

We live in an age of tremendous perils which threaten the very survival of our race, but, for that very reason, compel us to carry out a radical reform, political and moral, towards a better and safer destiny.

And we live in an age when the reign of Man in his full universality is being organized. States have set up institutions designed to establish it step by step. The peoples of the world must support those institutions and help them forward.

Unesco is one such agency. Born at the same time as yourselves, it was created for you. It has grown up with you, it is through you that it will come to be what it must be to fulfil the great hope it carries of achieving peace through the conversion of men's minds. By acclamation, the UN General Assembly adopted on December 7, 1965 a Declaration on the promotion among youth of the ideals of peace, mutual respect and understanding between peoples.

DAVID A. MORSE

Extrait d'une déclaration faite le 21 juin 1966 lors de la 50^e session de la Conférence internationale du travail à Genève (Communiqué de Presse de l'OIT, du 21 juin 1966).

N E pouvons-nous pas maintenant quitter le stade de l'apprentissage de la coopération internationale, nous attacher à une recherche plus positive de terrains communs plus amples, pour prendre conscience d'aspirations largement partagées, qui pourraient nous fournir le fondement d'une action commune plus large aussi, d'une coopération plus positive ? Aucun de vous n'a besoin de faire le sacrifice de ses principes fondamentaux. Au contraire, je souhaite que chacun de vous ait assez de confiance en soi-même, comme aussi assez de foi dans les valeurs morales et les objectifs sociaux qui lui sont le plus chers, pour être disposé à rechercher jusqu'à quel point ces valeurs et ces objectifs peuvent être librement mis en partage avec les dirigeants et les peuples du monde entier.

JACQUES de BOURBON BUSSET

Résumé, par M. Giovanni Hoyois, d'un exposé fait à la 53^e Session des Semaines Sociales de France (Nice, 9-14 juillet 1966), consacré au thème « L'opinion publique dans la vie internationale (Libre Belgique, 22 juillet 1966).

P REMIERE question : y a-t-il une réelle vie internationale ? La réponse n'est guère optimiste : ce qu'on appelle de ce nom n'est encore pratiquement que la juxtaposition des conduites des Etats nationaux. C'est plutôt dans les cabinets ministériels, dans les réunions de ministres « homologues », dans celles des experts appelés à explorer quelque chose et encore aussi, sans doute, dans les ambassades que se prennent les décisions dont dépendra la solution d'un problème affectant plusieurs nations. Presque toute cette préparation se fait dans le secret. Là politique étrangère demeurant presque partout l'apanage de l'exécutif, ce sont les gouvernements qui, ensemble, tissent en dehors de toute publicité la trame de leurs relations.

Si l'opinion publique a quelque rôle en ce domaine, c'est sur le plan de la politique intérieure. Les parlements ont à cet égard un rôle à jouer : ils peuvent susciter des débats, interpellier les ministres, et non seulement ratifier des accords déjà conclus. Or, les parlements sont sensibles à l'opinion, pour laquelle la presse d'information est un important relais. L'orateur allègue maints exemples tirés de l'histoire récente, notamment l'affaire de la Communauté européenne de Défense, en 1950, où l'opinion publique française a fait échouer un projet des gouvernements.

L'action d'une opinion nationale dans le domaine international s'exerce souvent d'une façon constante et profonde. Cette opinion repose sur un fond de sentiments et d'attitudes hérités du passé et souvent entretenus par l'éducation. Il n'est pas rare que les réactions issues du subconscient ou de l'irrationnel se mettent en travers d'une politique bien inspirée mais qui présente le défaut d'inautonomie économique mais aussi celles qui ont été surmontées inopé-ment même ensemble d'idées inhérentes à la psychologie d'un peuple. En dehors du cadre national, l'opinion publique se réduit à peu de chose. C'est en Europe que l'effort pour en créer une a été le plus considérable.

Les difficultés qui subsistent dans la construction de la Communauté économique mais aussi celles qui ont été surmontées montrent qu'il ne faut ni désespérer ni trop escompter d'une conscience vraiment européenne. Presque tout le monde pense encore « national » en parlant « européen ».

Quant aux autres parties du monde, on y a assisté à des élans communautaires qui ont été rapidement dominés par la flambée des nationalismes.

Sans doute existe-t-il des foyers d'action internationale, tels que ceux de l'ONU et de ses institutions spécialisées. Le rôle du secrétariat des Nations Unies a grandi en ces dernières années. De toutes les entreprises des organes internationaux résulte certainement une action sur l'opinion, qui en est venue à accorder une plus grande estime à ces institutions.

Il faut tenir compte aussi des nombreuses organisations privées qui agissent sur le plan international, tenant des congrès parfois retentissants ; plus souvent réunissant des commissions qui font du travail sérieux. C'est là, dans l'affrontement d'un grand nombre de questions qui ne figurent pas au tableau de la politique internationale, que s'opèrent sans doute les rapprochements les plus effectifs. Par dessus tout il faut reconnaître l'existence de ce corps essentiellement international qu'est l'Eglise, qui embrasse par vocation divine le monde entier.

Cette conférence, toute nourrie de constatations puisées dans l'expérience des dernières années, ne pêche certainement pas par excès d'optimisme. Mais elle tend à ce qu'une opinion « transnationale » arrive à se former pour le bien de l'humanité.

La Semaine Sociale de Nice, dans ses conclusions, a adopté sur cette question le texte suivant : « Depuis quelques années, il tend à se constituer une opinion internationale qui dépasse les cadres anciens des nations et des cultures. Elle est encore commençante et incohérente mais il est probable qu'elle connaîtra un développement rapide. Il importe de prendre conscience de ce fait nouveau et d'y adapter l'action sur l'opinion ».

KHALED MOHEI EL DIN

Member of the Presidential Committee of the World Council of Peace. Extract from an article which first appeared in the Cairo daily Akhbar al Yom on October 10, 1964 and reproduced in the June 1966 issue of Active Co-existence, published by the International Institute for Peace.

PEACEFUL coexistence between states with different social systems is the only correct path under existing world conditions. The sole alternative is nuclear war with its disastrous effects on the destiny of civilisation and of man. How will each of these systems attempt to prove itself superior to the other ? By means of military force and eventual war, or by means of peaceful coexistence and resultant peaceful competition ? The world is naturally in a state of flux.

just as are its political and social systems. It is beyond the bounds of possibility to stop the political, economic and ideological confrontation yet it is to be hoped that such a confrontation will take the form of peaceful competition in the fields of science, economy and ideology.

What, therefore, is the exact meaning of this important principle of international relations known as peaceful coexistence?

Put simply and clearly it means :

1. War should be abandoned as a means of settling differences between states.
2. The territorial sovereignty and independence of the various nations should be duly respected.
3. There should be no interference in the internal affairs of other states, be it to try and change their political or social system, or for any other purpose.
4. Political and economic relations between states should be based on equality and mutual interest.
5. General and complete disarmament with effective international controls, should be the goal, including a total ban on nuclear weapons, the abolition of armed forces (except those needed for defence), and the elimination of military bases on foreign soil as well as of military alliances and blocs.

Such a policy would undoubtedly lead to peaceful coexistence between the different social and political systems, and would prevent the exportation of revolution and counter-revolution.

This all goes to show that peaceful coexistence means something more than the absence of war between nations. It is true that it leads to peace, but peace on a higher level than heretofore. The principle of peaceful coexistence is a new principle in international relations, in the history of mankind.

GEORGES PALTHEY

Directeur general adjoint de l'Office des Nations Unies à Genève, Extrait de l'allocution prononcée à la séance de clôture du 4^e Congrès international sur l'organisation des Congrès, à Copenhague, le 2 avril 1966.

LE réseau immense et extraordinaire des organisations et des conférences internationales est essentiellement une entreprise pacifique. Chaque rencontre apporte sa contribution, large ou modeste, à l'édification de la paix : les rapports entre nations sont mieux organisés et des hommes qui, par leur profession sont souvent plus enracinés à leurs pays que des professionnels de la diplomatie se connaissent mieux, s'estiment davantage et nouent entre eux des liens d'amitié. Toute notre action repose sur la paix mais aussi en dépend. On peut se demander si ce mouvement gigantesque des nouveaux modes de relations internationales n'est pas malgré sa vigueur et son ampleur un colosse aux pieds d'argile, car la paix est fragile.

La paix n'est pas l'absence de guerre. Elle ne peut pas être construite seulement par des rapports d'amitié jetés au-dessus des frontières entre individus privilégiés ou par des structures économiques ou matérielles étendues au monde entier. Comme le proclame la Charte de l'UNESCO, « la guerre et la paix ont leur source dans le cœur des hommes » et c'est en convertissant les esprits et les cœurs que nous pourrions assurer une paix réelle et durable. Cette conversion ne se fera pas par des mots mais par l'établissement de la justice, une justice humaine, politique, économique et sociale qui assure en tout lieu le libre épanouissement de la personne humaine. Il serait vain de se dissimuler que cet idéal est peut-être irréalisable dans la société des hommes. Mais il n'est pas nécessaire d'être sûr du succès pour entreprendre. Nous savons que nous contribuons à l'arrivée de cette justice désirée par de si grandes masses humaines et que nous participons à la construction de la paix. Dans notre tâche modeste et indispensable, c'est notre grandeur et notre récompense.

MASAHIDE SHIBUSAWA

Leader of Moral Re-Armament in Japan.

Extract from a speech to Chinese university students in Taipeh (MRA Information Service, 11 June 1966).

THE present leadership of the world is, both in the Communist and non-Communist worlds, strangely lacking in direction and perspective. Every country and every class makes their case strongly that they are absolutely right and the others are absolutely wrong, but very few people seem to be concerned with what kind of world we create for ourselves and for our children. Will we still live in endless wars, poverty and despair thirty years from now ? Or is a new turn of world history possible ? Under the kind of leadership which refuses to face the challenge of history, we are bound to have a world where problems abound and nothing is really solved. The idea of class struggle is too small for this age. At the same time, however, we must be equipped with a theme and direction adequate and ready, when the time comes, to lead the whole of 700 million people of China to true greatness.

We must attempt to remake the character of civilisation so that every class, every race, and every nation will have its true part to play in the management of the world. The whole world is on tip-toe waiting for some nation to rise up and pioneer such a new way for humanity.

In order to make a nation really effective for the next years and decades to come, we need a theme for the world. There is no idea which can win and capture the minds and hearts of modern men other than an idea to remake the world.

FREDERICK H. BOLAND

Past President of the United Nations Assembly, Chancellor of Dublin University.

Extract from his address to the opening session of the 4th International Congress on Congress Organization, Copenhagen, 30th March 1966.

A FEATURE of the world of official diplomacy which should occasion us even more concern, perhaps, is the extent to which the man-in-the-street in all our countries feels himself so very far remote from it. He reads the news of the world in his daily paper, and no doubt at times—such as, for example, when the world is faced with some major political crisis—he does so with intense interest and even anxiety. But what about the rest of the time ? When he reads reports of the proceedings at the United Nations and other important official conferences, does he do so with any real sense of personal involvement ? Is he conscious that the clashes of official policy which he reads about may have an important bearing on the question of world peace and, therefore, of his own survival ? Does he regard himself as having any part to play in the task of furthering international harmony and understanding ? Or, as I am afraid is only too often the case, does he think of himself as simply a member of the audience at a discussion by a panel of experts in which the audience is not invited or expected to participate ? Surely, if the latter is the case, it is not a healthy state of affairs. Nor is the man-in-the-street altogether to blame. The United Nations was set up, not only as an answer to mankind's aspiration for peace and security, but also, in the words of the Charter, to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom. The Charter assumes an active sense of community and shared aspirations among peoples of different nations and it aims at making these common sentiments an operative force towards the achievement of the purposes of the United Nations. In practice, however, the United Nations must rely for the realisation of this aim on the technique of multilateral diplomacy, and it is no criticism of that time-honoured technique to say that, what between the inevitable wordiness of its discussions, its preoccupation with fine points of drafting, its necessary compromises and its caucuses and private conversations, the man-in-the-street is often left baffled and bewildered and a barrier of incomprehension is erected between him and the great world forums in which the official representatives of his own and other countries live and have their being. The best method yet devised for mitigating the problem of lack of communication which this situation creates lies in the holding of congresses on the unofficial level which bring together people of different countries who have interests in common.

As we all know, this method has been more and more widely used in recent years and experience has already amply demonstrated what enormous advantages, in terms of international goodwill and understanding, can be derived from it. The mere fact of people of different nationalities coming together for the discussion of interests and ideas, even on a purely non-political level, has a psychological effect of incalculable value. When the late Ernest Bevin opened the Marshall Plan conference in Paris in 1947, the idea of a United States of Europe was much in the air. Mr. Bevin made no reference to any such development in his speech, but he did express the hope that, out of their co-operation in the Marshall Plan, the countries represented at the conference would develop what he termed "a habit of association" which would prove fruitful for the future. How productive a force the "habit of association" can be has since been demonstrated. And congresses can do much to spread the "habit of association" between nations. They have already done so. The thousands of international associations which exist throughout the world today—associations of businessmen, scientists, labour leaders, teachers, bankers and so on—have already enlarged considerably the area of consensus which exists in world society. The non-political discussion of principles and ideas by people of different nationalities with intellectual or other interests in common has not only helped to elucidate and verify the principles and ideas concerned, but has also made a positive contribution to international understanding. And the measure of or consensus arrived at by even unofficial congresses can be a useful antidote to the ill-feeling apt to be engendered by conflicts or clashes of interest in the official field.

I am sure that you will forgive me, Mr. Chairman, if I say that, just as war is much too serious a thing to be left exclusively to soldiers, so peace is much too precious to mankind today to be left exclusively to diplomats. In this rapidly shrinking world of ours, the pursuit of peace, the task of ensuring better international relations, demands for its success, in addition to conferences on the governmental or diplomatic level, ever more frequent conventions or congresses in which people of different countries with interests in common can meet and share their ideas and experiences.

ARNOLD TOYNBEE

Extract from an article entitled
" International Voluntary Service.
An Historian's View " (YMCA World Communique, July-August 1966).

W HAT about international voluntary service in our present-day-World ? We are conscious of living in a time of unprecedentedly swift and radical change in every sphere of life. People of my age (seventy-six) have seen the World change, almost out of recognition, within the short span of a single lifetime. Has this transformation of the World made voluntary service superfluous ? Or has it made it more necessary and more valuable than it has ever been before ? Under the technological and economic and social conditions of our new world, it is now accepted that we can no longer get on without public action, national and international, on the grand scale. This is common ground among people professing many different ideologies. It is being accepted in practice in the United States, a country that, in theory, is dedicated to the ideology of unlimited free enterprise in all fields. Is not public action perhaps going to cater for all mankind's needs ? Is there a part still left for voluntary service to play ? As I see it, the need for voluntary service has become greater in our time than it has ever been before. Voluntary action and public action are not mutually exclusive ; they are complementary to each other. The more massive the public service that mankind requires, the greater the need to supplement and balance it by voluntary service. Here is a pair of fields of action in which "co-existence", "prolife-ration", and "escalation" can all be welcomed, whole-heartedly and without controversy, as movements that are life-giving, not death-bringing.

In the structuré of our present-day world, there are at least three vitally important points in which international voluntary service has a pan to play that cannot be played by any other social agency. International voluntary service can help knit the human race together into a single family. It can help to reduce—in the end, to vanishing point—the present gulf between "haves" and "have-nots". It can help the individual human being still to play an effective personal part in a society that threatens to dwarf him by its size and to baffle him by its complexity.

Collective letter to the London Times, by eleven distinguished scientists — 4 from the USA, 2 from the USSR, 2 French, 1 English, 1 Belgian and 1 Italian — who helped elaborate and took-part in the programmes of study and research connected with the International Geophysical Year and the International Years of the Quiet Sun, organized by the ICSU (International Council of Scientific Unions), with assistance from UNESCO.

DECEMBER 31, 1965, marked the end of the observational phase of the International Years of the Quiet Sun. This two-year enterprise, involving the closest co-operation between scientists of no fewer than 71 countries, has been, concerned with the study of the sun and the earth under conditions of minimum solar activity. It formed a complementary enterprise to the even greater scientific cooperative project of seven years ago—the International Geophysical Year.

Both projects were organized by special committees appointed by the International Council of Scientific Unions and financial assistance was given by this Council, by Unesco, and by the participating nations.

Beyond question, the scientific achievements of these two enterprises have been immense and there can be little doubt that as a result of the IGY and IQSY, man's understanding of solar and terrestrial phenomena and of the relationship between them, has advanced to a really enormous degree. Vast stores of data have been assembled in World Data Centres located in a number of countries and are freely available for study by scientists of every country. The planning and organization of these enterprises has occupied the time and energy of innumerable scientists from all nations over a period of several years. Men of science of every nation have been brought together in a spirit of friendly understanding and cooperation which has known no barriers of nationality, race, colour, religious or political opinion.

The basic objective of both these projects could be summarized in the phrase : "The common study of our planet by all for the benefit of all", and it is certain that the objective has been achieved in full measure. These world-wide cooperative scientific projects have shown conclusively that, however many and serious are the political problems that trouble the human race, it is possible for all the nations of the world to work closely together in great enterprises for the common good.

We, the undersigned, officers of the special committees which organized the projects, wish to commend the examples of the IGY and IQSY to the peoples of all nations. At the same time, we would wish to express the earnest hope that scientific academies and governments everywhere will resolve to place this cooperation in geophysical science on a permanent basis.

In so doing, we feel that not only will the rapid advance of geophysical science be maintained but, more importantly, it is certain that this continued close cooperation between men of science from all parts of the world will make a significant contribution to the wider field of human understanding and goodwill.

ROMEO MAIONE
Président de l'Assemblée Mondiale de la Jeunesse.

Question : Les organisations de jeunesse se font de plus en plus nombreuses, même dans les pays en voie de développement. Est-ce un signe important ? Cela se remarque-t-il d'une manière très aiguë ?

Questions et réponses lors d'une interview radiophonique sur les grandes lignes des programmes de la WAY et le rôle des jeunes dans le monde d'aujourd'hui (WAY Forum, June 1966).

Maione : Je pense qu'il y a tout un développement qui se fait. Il y a le premier stade du développement. Je songe en particulier à l'Afrique où ce furent les organisations internationales qui lancèrent un peu les mêmes types d'organisations que celles déjà mises sur pied dans les pays développés. Les Africains commencent à trouver maintenant leurs propres méthodes et moyens d'organisation et, de plus en plus, ils créent des organisations. La grande question qui se pose est : quelles relations ces organisations doivent-elles avoir avec les gouvernements ? Dans certains pays, ces relations sont très étroites, en ce sens qu'elles sont presque dirigées par le gouvernement. Dans d'autres pays, les organisations ont beaucoup plus de liberté pour prendre des initiatives en vue d'établir de nouveaux programmes avec l'aide du gouvernement. Je pense que ces deux tendances commencent à s'affronter, mais la tendance essentielle, que la jeunesse commence à s'organiser, se fait sentir dans tous ces pays...

Question : Les jeunes, lorsqu'ils s'organisent dépassent donc le niveau national, dépassent les particularismes nationaux ?

Maione : Oui et non. Vous savez que la réalité nationale aujourd'hui, c'est encore franchement une réalité. Et on a besoin de faire des efforts pour arriver à toucher l'autre réalité : la réalité du monde technologique qui dépasse les frontières nationales. C'est très difficile de vivre seulement entouré de frontières nationales quand, par exemple, demain nous verrons l'avion Concorde voler de l'Europe à l'Amérique du Nord en trois heures, quand nous verrons le soleil se coucher à l'Est. Mais souvent, nous autres, nous sommes pris dans ce mythe national qui remonte au temps où nous voyageons à cheval et nous n'arrivons pas encore à comprendre cette nouvelle réalité. Je pense que dans nos mouvements de jeunesse, particulièrement dans l'Assemblée Mondiale de la Jeunesse, on s'efforce à ce que les jeunes soient conscients de leur réalité et qu'ils soient fiers de leur réalité nationale. Mais ils doivent faire des efforts pour que cette réalité soit dépassée et que la nouvelle réalité qui confronte tout le monde soit atteinte. Ce n'est pas une question d'idéologie, non plus qu'une question de religion ou de race. C'est une question essentiellement de géographie et le monde aujourd'hui a presque honte de la géographie. Je pense que la réalité nationale est chaque jour un peu plus dépassée.

Question : Vous avez confiance alors ?

Maione : J'ai toujours confiance. Dans un monde où naguère 80 % de la population vivait dans la misère totale, sans éducation, sans possibilité d'éducation, on entrevoit aujourd'hui la possibilité de donner une éducation à tout le monde. Je suis plein d'espérance !

WILLEM VISSER 't HOOFT
Secrétaire général du Conseil Œcuménique des Églises.

LES fonctionnaires internationaux n'appartiennent pas aux classifications normales. Sortant du cadre traditionnel des nations, ils

Extrait d'un résumé par M^{me} Ursula Reich d'un exposé fait le 25 février 1965 à Genève lors de la 8^e Conférence annuelle du Foyer John Knox, consacrée au thème « le fonctionnaire international et le monde d'aujourd'hui (Le Courrier CERN, juin 1965).

préfigurent la société internationale encore embryonnaire. Certains les prennent pour les prophètes du monde futur, d'autres pour des profiteurs. Très peu comprennent leurs vrais problèmes. Un de ceux-là est le déracinement, fréquent de notre temps, mais avec ceci de particulier que le fonctionnaire international entre dans une société de déracinés dont les racines sont fort différentes les unes des autres. Il court le danger de se sentir vite perdu devant la difficulté des contacts avec des gens d'autres races, milieux et cultures, et de se replier sur soi-même ou sur sa colonie nationale. Un autre problème fondamental est la relation avec son pays d'origine. La Charte des Nations Unies souligne la nécessité absolue de l'indépendance du fonctionnaire international face à son pays d'origine. Sans parler de l'influence inconsciente du milieu originel, cela est irréalisable, le fonctionnaire dépendant de son gouvernement, ou de toute autre organisation nationale, pour son avenir. D'autre part, le propre des institutions internationales est de ne pas avoir d'idéologie définie. Le fonctionnaire international qui veut être indépendant se trouve donc dans une sorte de vide, rien ne venant remplacer le lien naturel avec son pays.

Un troisième problème provient de ce que le fonctionnaire international doit constamment s'abstenir, dans sa vie professionnelle, de prendre position idéologiquement, théologiquement, ou politiquement. Il risque ainsi de devenir très vite un homme qui ne s'engage pas.

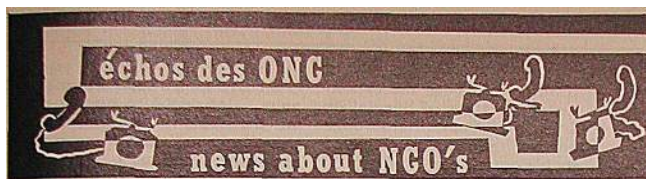

Comment surmonter ces difficultés ? Le fonctionnaire international doit être profondément convaincu que le monde a besoin de bons techniciens en relations internationales, au même titre que de bons agriculteurs ou de bons mécaniciens, et qu'ils sont d'autant plus importants qu'ils doivent créer du neuf.

Pour accomplir sa vocation, le fonctionnaire international a besoin d'un équipement intellectuel — une grande curiosité intellectuelle, la connaissance d'autres langues —, mais doit aussi croire à la possibilité d'une amitié entre hommes de cultures, de nations, de races différentes.

Enfin, pour remédier au pluralisme politique, idéologique, religieux, culturel, au fait que son métier n'a pas d'éthique professionnelle définie et au fait qu'il n'a pas l'appui d'un milieu social cohérent, le fonctionnaire international doit s'enraciner consciemment dans une conviction profonde. C'est là le vrai remède contre le déracinement. Il ne peut pas s'attendre à vivre tranquille puisque le monde est toujours menacé d'explosions idéologiques ou nationalistes, mais il n'a pas le droit de désertir, engagé qu'il est dans le grand combat des forces constructives contre les forces destructives. Cette conviction était le secret de Dag Hammarskjöld, l'exemple vivant de ce que doit être tout fonctionnaire international : « Pour quelqu'un dont la tâche reflète si évidemment les possibilités et les responsabilités humaines, il n'y a pas d'excuse s'il perd la conviction 'd'avoir été appelé'. Tant qu'il garde cela, tout ce qu'il peut faire a un sens et rien n'a un prix ».

H Universalité : Peu de traités internationaux peuvent sans doute rivaliser avec les Conventions de Genève sous le rapport de l'universalité. Il semble, en effet, qu'aucun Etat du monde ne soit demeuré complètement étranger au « droit de Genève » dont l'origine remonte à la Convention de 1864 signée grâce à l'initiative d'Henry Dunant et de ses collègues du comité fondateur de la Croix-Rouge.

La situation, à l'heure actuelle, se présente de la manière suivante : 109 Etats sont parties aux Conventions de Genève du 12 août 1949, le dernier étant le Honduras, dont l'adhésion date du 31 décembre 1965. Cependant à ces 109, on peut ajouter dix autres Etats. En effet, le CICR a toujours considéré qu'un territoire accédant à l'indépendance demeure lié par les traités d'intérêt public ou général qu'aurait signé la puissance y exerçant précédemment la souveraineté. Ainsi les Conventions de Genève restent en vigueur, à moins que le nouvel Etat ne répudie expressément ces traités signés par l'Etat auquel il a succédé.

Structure and Method : At the 11th General Assembly of the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU) several recommendations were adopted concerning the future structure of the Council :

- New Unions should be admitted to membership of ICSU only when there is no possibility for an existing Union to accommodate the new discipline by modification of its own structure.

- A National Member should not normally be considered as ready for full membership unless it can fulfil the obligations imposed by full membership and has a national body representing its scientific activities which has been in existence in some form for six years.

- Each Union should have a Representative on the Executive Committee, and one additional National Representative should be elected to the Executive Committee for every two additional Union Representatives above the present number of fourteen.

- An interval of two years should be maintained between General Assemblies.

The President should be eligible for re-election for a second term of two years, and the Secretary-General and Treasurer should be eligible for not more than three successive terms of office.

- A standing Committee for Organization and Admissions should be set up, consisting of the President and eight other members not necessarily Members of the Executive Committee.

Pour ce faire, il faudra obtenir la coopération des agences financières internationales et régionales, telles que la Banque mondiale, la Banque interaméricaine du Développement, la Banque asiatique de Développement, le Fonds du Développement de la Communauté économique européenne.

C'est ainsi que s'exprimait récemment le Secrétaire général de la Fédération internationale des producteurs agricoles (FIPA). Et il s'expliquait :

« Dans les milieux internationaux — et peut-être surtout parmi les délégués surchargés de travail qui assistent à ses conférences et réunions —, la FIPA s'est taillée la réputation d'un travailleur infatigable. Ni les documents de travail soumis aux délégations, ni les thèmes discutés chaque jour pendant de longues heures, ni la mise au point laborieuse des rapports (presque toujours adoptés à l'unanimité par les délégations de trente-trois pays, de langues et de cultures différentes) ne suffisent à conjurer l'image d'une agréable

Il est incontestable que si, dans bien des pays, les dirigeants agricoles sont mieux informés et abordent les problèmes avec plus d'ouverture d'esprit, c'est grâce à des années de travail en commun sur des problèmes préoccupants pour tous. Je ne connais pas de meilleure méthode pour désamorcer les problèmes explosifs et dégager peu à peu des compromis raisonnables ».

Chambers of commerce : The 5th Conference of the Afro-Asian Organisation for Economic Co-operation (AFRASEC) held in Casablanca 16-19 May 1966 adopted a resolution concerning the role of its members in economic development :

" Emphasising the importance of the role which the chambers of commerce and industry can play in the economic development of African and Asian countries :

Recalling the Recommendation of the First AFRASEC Conference (Cairo, 1958), concerning the establishment of an inter-governmental organisation to undertake functions parallel to those of AFRASEC at the governmental level :

Stressing the advantages of associating chambers of commerce and industry with the programmes and policies of external assistance as well as those relating to intra-regional mutual aid :

Taking into account the international status of the AFRASEC and its capabilities in regard to the proper conduct and organisation of external assistance, and the desirability of maintaining regular and effective contacts with international agencies interested in the economic development and the external trade of Afro-Asian countries :

Resolves :

- 1) to reiterate its recommendation to the governments of African and Asian countries to establish an inter-governmental organisation parallel to the AFRASEC;
- 2) to request the Secretary-General to organise, where possible and appropriate, activities in selected areas of the Afro-Asian region, aiming at facilitating the task of the Centre;
- 3) to urge the Secretary-General to offer any such assistance to national chambers of commerce and industry and similar institutions in African and Asian countries as he may be able to do in order to enable them to enlarge and intensify their role in economic development especially in the fields of promoting facilities for training, exchange of information, organising exhibitions, export promotion, participation in international fairs, market research, undertaking feasibility studies, trade missions and so on;

- 4) to endorse the promotional endeavours of the Secretary-General for the purpose of projecting the proper image and potential of the AFRASEC at the international level, and to encourage him to expand these endeavours with the help of constituent members ».

Among other resolutions is the appointment of two ad hoc commissions of AFRASEC : 1) Commission on balance of payments

- 2) Commission for industrialisation.

B Nouveau périodique : Faisant suite au « Bulletin » qui paraissait depuis 1956, « Solidarité » est désormais l'organe du Mouvement international de la jeunesse agricole et rurale catholique. Il paraîtra 4 fois par an en français, allemand et espagnol. Le premier numéro a paru en juillet 1966. « Solidarité » s'adresse principalement aux dirigeants nationaux et diocésains des mouvements membres en s'efforçant de leur apporter les éléments d'information et d'appréciation qu'ils attendent pour mener à bien leur travail de dirigeants, éducateurs d'hommes, promoteurs d'un ordre rural nouveau; en même temps « Solidarité » fera connaître la vie, les souhaits, les réalisations de la jeunesse rurale du monde, en particulier de la jeunesse organisée.

IGO/NGO collaboration : The International Computation Centre and the International Federation for Information Processing have appointed an international advisory Committee for supervision of seminars on information processing in administration.

CUMULATIVE INDEX

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS CALENDAR
1966 edition

and SUPPLEMENTS 1-9 (January-September 1966 incl)

This index replaces the one which appeared on pages 115-123 of the 1966 edition of the "International Congress Calendar". It includes all modifications and additions printed in the first nine supplements, which appeared in the January (Ja), February (F), March (Mr), April (Ap), May (My), June (Je), July (Jy), August (Au) and September (Se) 1966 issues of "International Associations".

Cet index remplace celui publié pages 115-123 de l'édition 1966 du « International Congress Calendar ». Il réfère non seulement aux notices parues dans le Calendrier annuel, mais aussi aux annonces modifiées ou nouvelles parues dans les neuf premiers suppléments de janvier (Ja), février (F), mars (Mr), avril (Ap), mai (My), juin (Je), juillet (Jy), août (Au) et septembre (Se) 1966 insérés dans cette Revue.

Une nouvelle publication de l'

Union des Associations Internationales

Guide pratique à l'usage des utilisateurs de services d'interprétation de conférence rédigé par l'Association Internationale des Interprètes de Conférence.

On trouve dans cet ouvrage des conseils fondés sur l'expérience des membres de l'AIIIC concernant :

- le choix de la méthode d'interprétation appropriée à chaque conférence;
- les modalités de recrutement des interprètes;
- les dispositions techniques et matérielles optima;
- l'organisation des séances de travail.

En annexe figurent plusieurs documents donnés à titre d'information (extraits du Code Professionnel, tarif, principes à observer en matière de recrutement) ou de modèle (lettre d'engagement, lettre aux participants d'un congrès, fiches techniques).

1966, éditions française et anglaise, 24 pages : 50 FB; $ 1 ; 5 FF; 4,50 FS, etc. — Publ. UAI, n°197.

1, rue aux Laines, Bruxelles.
