

UIA Associations Customised Data Extractions 2018

The UIA's database

The Union of International Associations (UIA) maintains a database on international civil society: international non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and inter-governmental organizations (IGOs).

The UIA's databases Yearbook of International Organizations and International Congress Calendar are continuously updated and currently include descriptive profiles of over 75,750 international associations – including contact details, history, aims, and membership – and details on over 470,000 international meetings of these bodies, from 1850 to the present, and also far into the future.

The Union of International Associations (UIA) is a non-profit, independent, apolitical, and non-governmental institution in the service of international associations. Since its foundation in 1907 the UIA has focussed on documenting the nature and evolution of international civil society. The approach is scientific, the result is quality.

You can subscribe to the database – online or in print – or you can ask UIA to provide data extractions from the database according to your needs. For information on subscriptions, please ask UIA for more information or see <http://www.uia.org/membership/associate>. For information on customised data extractions, please read on!

Who uses it

Everyone with an interest in international associations and cooperation can request a data extraction. UIA reserves the right to refuse all or part of any request.

UIA's clients are worldwide and include a wide range of companies within the meeting industry – PCO's, convention centers, tourism bureaus, hotels, airlines – as well as consulting companies, publishers, research institutes, university departments, libraries, international associations, government bodies and IGOs.

Structured information

UIA's data are structured, comprehensive and concise. The structured framework enables extensive comparison and focussed extraction.

Please see below for a full description of what information the profiles may contain.

Frequent requests

- addresses of associations with a principal or secondary office in a specified country
- addresses of associations with members in a specified country but no events in that country
- profiles of international associations with an interest in a specified subject
- profiles of international association meetings in a specified year and country
- list of associations holding future meetings on a specified subject

Select the associations you need

- Any combination of the following criteria is possible.
- The association:
 - has (or does not have) a principal address in specified cities or countries
 - has (or does not have) a principal or other address in specified cities or countries
 - was (or was not) founded in a specified year, and/or city, and/or country
 - has (or does not have) a focus on a specified subject
 - hosts (or does not host) events of some sort (whether or not we have details on those events)
 - hosts (or does not host) events in a specified city or country
 - hosts (or does not host) events in a specified year
 - hosts (or does not host) events with more or less than a specified number of participants
 - hosts (or does not host) events lasting more or less than a specified number of days
 - has (or does not have) publications
 - has (or does not have) members in specified countries or continents
 - has (or does not have) members in a specified number of countries or continents
 - has (or does not have) a working relationship with another specified association
 - is (or is not) classified as a specified type

What's in an address?

The UIA editors aim to collect for every association the following contact information:

- name of the contact person, with title/function
- full postal address (street, box number, city, postal code, country)
- full telephone and fax numbers (country code, area code, extension numbers)
- e-mail addresses

If an association has several contact addresses, one is selected as the principal address; this is generally the address of the association's headquarters or its most prominent officer. As relevant, other addresses may be included, such as regional representatives, branch offices, or other significant officers.

Select the information you need

You can select the part of the associations profile of interest to you. Associations profiles may contain the following information:

- name and acronym of the association – This is usually, but not always, the official name in English; names and acronyms in other languages are also available for many associations.
- addresses – see above for details
- URL(s)
- history of the association – When and where the association was founded, the names of founding bodies, and former or alternative names.
- aims of the association – The association's principal objectives, usually based on the statutes. Keywords in this paragraph are, along with the association's name, used to determine the association's field of interest and, by extension, the subjects under which it is classified.
- structure of the association – Key organs and commissions, together with some indication of the frequency of their meetings and the composition of the executive body.
- languages used by the association
- staff – The number of paid and voluntary staff.
- finance – Sources of funding and the annual budget figure, where available, as well as sponsoring bodies.
- activities – A summary of the main activities and programme concerns of each association.
- events – The date and location of periodic meetings or other events (exhibitions, seminars, etc.), both past and future.
- publications and information services – Titles of major periodical and non-periodical publications produced, as well as libraries, databanks, consultancy services and other information resources operated by the association.
- membership – Types of membership and an indication of the number of members, with a list of countries represented or in which members are located.
- relations with IGOs – Officially recognized relationships, such as consultative status, with intergovernmental organizations.
- relations with NGOs – Official or working relationships to international NGOs.
- date on which the last information was received from or about the association
- type classification – UIA has developed a hierarchical typology and a qualifying typology to help indicate the degree of "internationality" and relevant structural characteristics.

In addition, you can select the part of the meetings profile of interest to you. Meetings profiles may contain the following information:

- the city and country in which the event is held
- the dates on which the event starts and/or ends
- the names of other international associations involved in the event
- the name and theme of the event
- the number of participants, or the minimum and maximum numbers expected
- the number of countries represented, or the minimum and maximum numbers expected
- whether or not there is a concurrent exhibition
